

Interdisciplinary Approaches in Agricultural and Environmental Education

Relationships - Inspiration - Cooperation

ENTER Study Days 11 – 13 May, 2016 Prague

Czech University of Life Sciences Prague

Institute of Education and Communication

Study days topic

The conference seeks to answer the question of what interdisciplinary cooperation means in vocational education and how it can be developed in school practice. Specifically, it is our hope that participants from abroad and from the Czech Republic will share their experience and discuss how curricula of vocational education mingle and inspire each other. We are also interested in how teachers of individual subjects can work together, how interdisciplinary cooperation is manifested in specific forms and methods of teaching and what competences students should get to be able to navigate themselves and to succeed in today's complex and highly interconnected world. We also focus on environmental issues and the importance of the phenomenon of globalization in vocational education.
